The MRC aims to be as open as possible in informing others how we conduct our business through our publications, our website and face-to-face discussions. This Publication Scheme provides information about the MRC and our work, outlines the information we routinely publish and provides links to help you locate it.

The MRC is committed to openness, good record-keeping and effective communication in our handling of requests for information under the Freedom of Information Act. All information will be made freely available unless there is a good reason not to do so, in line with relevant exemptions under the Act. Our publications, our website and those of our units and institutes are developed with this goal in mind.

PART ONE: INTRODUCTION

1.1 The Medical Research Council

The Medical Research Council (MRC) is a publicly-funded organisation dedicated to improving human health. We support and advance medical research in three main ways:

- Providing research grants and career awards to researchers in UK universities and hospitals.
- Funding research centres in partnership with universities.
- Supporting research with the MRC's own research facilities.

The heart of our mission is to improve human health through world-class medical research. To achieve this, we support research across the biomedical spectrum, from fundamental laboratory-based science to clinical trials, and in all major disease areas. We work closely with the UK Health Departments, the UK research councils, industry, charities and other national and international stakeholders to deliver our mission, and give a high priority to research that is likely to make a real difference to clinical practice and the health of the population.

The MRC is a Non-Departmental Body (NDPB) and receives annual 'grant-in-aid' funding from Parliament through the Department for Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy (BEIS). Though government-funded, the MRC is independent in its choice of which research to support.

The MRC's mission, as set out in our Royal Charter¹, is to:

- Encourage and support research to improve human health.
- Produce skilled researchers.
- Advance and disseminate knowledge and technology to improve the quality of life and economic competitiveness of the UK.
- Promote dialogue with the public about medical research.

1.2 Freedom of Information Act 2000

The Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) 2000 establishes a general right of access to all types of recorded information held by public authorities, sets out exceptions to that right, and places a number of obligations on such bodies.

On making a request for information to the MRC, you are entitled to:

- To be informed in writing whether the MRC holds information of the description specified in your request.
- To have that information communicated to you, unless the information falls under one of the specified exemptions of the Act.

The Act provides a time limit for dealing with a request for information - that is, within 20 working days. The Act also provides for an appeal mechanism whereby you may apply to the Information Commissioner² for a decision as to whether a specified request was dealt with in accordance with the Act. A fee may be charged for processing requests for information under the Act.

1.3 Publication scheme

All public authorities designated under the Act are obliged to adopt and maintain a publication scheme. The publication scheme sets out:

- The classes of information public authorities publish, intend to publish or otherwise make available as a matter of course.
- How the information is, or is intended to be, published.
- Whether the material is, or is intended to be, made available to the public free of charge or on payment.

The purpose of the publication scheme is to ensure that a large amount of information is readily available to the public, i.e. without the need for specific consideration under the Act, and to inform the public of the extent of material that is available. The term "readily available" means that the information is available on the MRC's website, may be purchased from The Stationery Office (TSO), may be obtained from a public library, or will be supplied promptly on receipt of a written request to the MRC.

PART TWO of this scheme sets out the classes of information that the MRC publishes or intends to publish.

1.4 Responsibility for the publication scheme and comments and complaints about the scheme

The MRC's Freedom of Information Officer is responsible for maintaining the publication scheme.

If you have any comments about the MRC's publication scheme, or if you think we have not supplied information in accordance with the scheme, you should contact the MRC's Freedom of Information Officer in the first instance.

1.5 Charges

The MRC normally expects to make the information outlined in PART TWO of this scheme available free of charge. However, it may be necessary to make a charge in some cases, for instance where the cost of extracting the information requested is high or where multiple copies of multiple publications or documents have been requested. Any potential charges will be identified by the MRC when acknowledging the request and would be payable in advance.

The MRC also reserves the right to charge fees in accordance the Freedom of Information and Data Protection (Appropriate Limit and Fees) Regulation 2004³.

1.6 Copyright

The material available through this publication scheme is subject to copyright protection unless otherwise indicated. MRC material protected by copyright may be reproduced free of charge in any format or medium provided it is reproduced accurately and not used in a misleading context. Where any copyright items in this scheme are being republished or copied to others, the source of the material must be identified and the copyright status acknowledged.

Permission to reproduce copyright protected material does not extend to any material accessed through the publication scheme that is the property of third parties. Permission to reproduce such material must be obtained from the copyright holder(s) concerned.

1.7 Requests for non-personal information: the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (FOIA) and Environmental Information Regulations 2004 (EIR)

If the information you require is not specified in this publication scheme, you may request this information under FOIA or EIR by contacting the MRC's Freedom of Information Officer. To help us to locate any information that might be held, please outline your request as clearly as possible, providing any relevant dates, organisations or names. You may also wish to specify in what format you would like to receive the information, either in hard copy or in electronic format.

Your right to access information is subject to a range of exemptions. These may include security, information provided in confidence, that is intended for publication or which is commercially sensitive. Where we consider that an exemption might apply, we will consider the Public Interest Test to determine whether or not the information may be released.

We normally expect to be able to make any information requested available free of charge. However, the MRC reserves the right to charge fees in accordance the Freedom of Information and Data Protection (Appropriate Limit and Fees) Regulation 2004⁴ and guidance issued by the Ministry of Justice⁵.

We aim to respond to your request within 20 working days from the date of receipt. However, there may be cases where we may need longer, for instance where we consider that qualified exemptions under the FOIA that require consideration of a Public Interest Test might apply. In such cases we will aim to provide an estimate of the time this work might take and provide and update as the work progresses.
