A Brief History of the MRC Charter

1913 The Medical Research Council was established to administer funds provided for medical research under the terms of the 1911 National Insurance Act.

1919 Responsibility for the direction of the work was transferred to a ministerial Committee of the Privy Council.

1920 The Medical Research Council's first charter was granted.

1966 Her Majesty the Queen granted a new Charter necessitated by constitutional changes introduced by the Science and Technology Act 1965. Formal responsibility for the work of Council passed from the Committee of the Privy Council to the Secretary of State for Education and Science.

1973 Charter was amended in line with the recommendation in the Government White Paper "Framework for Government Research and Development" that Government Departments, in receipt of funds transferred from the Science Vote and who might commission work from Council with these funds, be represented on Council.

1993 Government White Paper on Science and Technology "Realising our Potential" initiated a revision of the Charter. Her Majesty the Queen granted a Supplemental Charter in which the objects of the Council were defined in line with the new mission statement set out in the White Paper.

2003 Following the 2001 Quinquennial review of the Research Councils and the creation of Research Councils UK (in May 2002), a further revision of the Charter was initiated mainly to include specific references to cross-Council working. Her Majesty the Queen granted a Supplemental Charter for MRC at the Privy Council meeting on 17 July 2003. Its operative date was 21 July 2003.
